

The official member publication of the Association of Independent Information Professionals

connections

In This Issue

- 2 Inside Connections - From the Editor
- 3 President's Message
- 4 Spotlight on Silver Industry Partners
- 5 Thriving in the New Normal: The AIIP 2018 Conference in Minneapolis, MN
- 7 Thriving in the New Normal: The Printer and the Super Heroes
- 8 Online Project Management Tools: Wunderlist vs. Todoist
- 10 The Frankfurt Book Fair, 11–15 October 2017
- 12 Learning about Access to Information Requests: A Newbie's Journey
- 14 Coach's Corner: The Introvert's Guide to F2F and Surviving

March 2018

association of independent information
professionals
KNOWLEDGE DELIVERED

Volume 32 | Issue 1

Inside Connections

FROM THE EDITOR

AIIP President Scott Attenborough has a few final words before “riding off into the sunset” after he hands the gavel to Cindy Shamel in April. In his final President’s Message, Scott updates us on some of the key actions AIIP has taken this year.

The Spotlight is on AIIP’s new silver industry partners. Judith Binder gives us a snapshot of the four new vendors and outlines benefits available to AIIP members.

I would love to attend the Frankfurt Book Fair, and Birgit Bauer lets us live vicariously through her, as she gives us a peek inside the world’s largest trade fair for books.

It’s a new year and some IPs may be having thoughts of improved productivity in 2018. Beth Plutchak compares Wunderlist and Todoist to help you gain control over your online projects.

New member Claudia Beach was curious about government information as a resource and wanted to learn more about making freedom of information requests. What better way to learn than to talk to AIIP members who have the experience? Claudia shares her discoveries with us so we can all learn something new.

The upcoming AIIP Conference will be held in Minneapolis, MN from 19–22 April, 2018. Barbara Ingrassia offers just a taste of her conference session. Lynn Strand shares some of what you can expect throughout the conference, both on the program and during the busy off hours when you want to be networking with other attendees.

Oh, you don’t like networking? You’re an introvert, you say? Mary Ellen Bates has your back and offers her top tips to help introverts survive, nay win, at networking.

I will be at the conference and will try really hard to put Mary Ellen’s tips into practice while I’m there. I would love to hear what you want to see in future issues of your favorite quarterly read—AIIP Connections. See you in Minneapolis!

Phyllis Smith
Editor, AIIP Connections
Halton Hills, Ontario, Canada

AIIP Connections

www.aiip.org/Discover/AIIP-Connections

AIIP 8550 United Plaza Blvd., Ste. 1001,
Baton Rouge, LA 70809

United States, 225-408-4400

Editor

Phyllis Smith

ConnectionsEditor@aiip.org

Copy Editors

Susanne Bjørner, Bjørner & Associates

Robbie Marks, Marks Information

Nora Stoecker, NKS Info Services

Sub-editors

Vikki Bell, Deirdre Black, Mary Ellen Bates,

Rhonda Kleiman

Advertising Director

Cliff Kalibjan, Mr. Health Search

kalib8@sbcglobal.net

Design and Layout

Studio Fourteen

studiofourteen.ca

AIIP Director of Digital Presence

Ken Watson, Watson Knowledge

Services, LLC

AIIP Connections (ISSN 1524-9468) is published quarterly and is copyrighted © 2018 by the Association of Independent Information Professionals, 8550 United Plaza Blvd. Baton Rouge, LA 70809 United States

Subscriptions:

Free to AIIP members. Material contained in AIIP Connections is copyrighted. For permission to reprint, contact AIIP at 225-408-4400, or at info@aiip.org.

The Frankfurt Book Fair, October 2017

By Birgit Bauer, Bauer Business Research, Austria

Although I live in the neighborhood of Germany, I'd never considered attending the Frankfurt Book Fair. "It's just for publishers," I thought. Invited to give a presentation at one of the events this past October, I afterwards had another full day to just enjoy the fair. And I was impressed.

Largest trade fair for books in the world

The figures:

- 7,300 exhibitors from more than 100 countries.
- 172,000 trade visitors at the first three days.
- In total 286,000 visitors from 150 countries.
- 4,000 events like workshops, presentations, interviews, panel discussions, readings, signing sessions, award ceremonies, meet & greets with authors, writing celebrities or experts.
- More than 10,000 accredited journalists, including 2,400 bloggers.

The first three days of the fair are designed for professionals—publishers, agents, librarians, scientists, booksellers, authors, illustrators, translators, multimedia providers, associations, and many more. They meet to show their offers, to do business, and to negotiate publishing rights and license fees. The last two days are for the reading public.

Books, digital products, workshops, learning

To get an overview, I started by walking through most of the halls and levels. Books, books, books everywhere—paradise both for experts and passionate readers. Hall 4.2, pleasantly quiet then, hosted content providers, like Genios, ProQuest, and Springer. The "Hot Spots" program put digital solutions and products in the spotlight. It concentrated exhibitors and presentations in the areas of specialist information, services for libraries, teaching and learning solutions, and products and services for digital publishing.

Then I turned to the busy self-publishing area introduced in 2013 and attended free workshops like "Storytelling & Marketing in Self-Publishing" and "Fight Against E-book Piracy". A question that popped up in several discussions was: Does writing blogs as a self-marketing tool makes sense? The answer (as expected): Only if you do it regularly and with passion—better no blog than a bad one. Another question:

What helps to sell your book? In brief: To know your audience (“Who sells to everyone, does not sell to anyone”), have a good cover design, and be available on Amazon and achieve an Amazon ranking.

Most of the workshops, learning sessions, and interviews happen in small casual seating arrangements distributed over the four exhibition buildings. So, although the fair is overwhelmingly huge, it feels pleasant and there is plenty of opportunity to interact, to ask questions, and to speak with participants, authors and exhibitors. The sessions of half-an-hour or one-hour’s length covered a wide variety of topics. Examples include: the book market, who e-book readers are, tips on book marketing, what makes a good book cover, content protection strategies, tools for academic publishers, publishing 4.0, digital publishing trends, eLibraries, Internet Archive, how to Google, crowdfunding for open source, science slam, cooking, French baking, professional soccer, herbalism and many more.

TV, famous authors, and celebrities

TV teams were everywhere, often just an arm’s length away. I passed by author Salman Rushdie who was giving a public interview to ZDF, one of the main German broadcasting stations. It is surprising how close to famous authors you can get at the fair. Margaret Atwood, Dan Brown, Ken Follett, Cecelia Ahern, Reinhold Messner, and Robert Menasse are just some of the big names of the many hundreds of well-known authors and writing celebrities who were reading, signing, and giving interviews.

Join us!

WE WANT YOU TO FEEL LIKE THERE IS NOTHING YOU CAN'T DO

~ The people who brought you
TC Dojo, TC Dojo Mastermind, TC Dojo Conclave, Arbortext Monster Garage, and TC Camp

conclave.tcdjo.org

Is it worth attending?

The book fair is definitely of interest for the publishers, editors, librarians, translators, authors, and self-publishers among us. Although the main language is German, more than 1,000 English-language publishers (mainly from the U.S. and U.K.) exhibited and roughly 600 events were in English. The fair offers all kinds of free or fee-based events, a preconference called The Markets focusing on the publishing market, and even a networking opportunity for info pros that included about 150 participants. Being in Germany or Europe, it is easy to get there. The venue is located in the center of the city, just a ten-minute walk from Frankfurt Hauptbahnhof, the main railway station (with direct trains from Frankfurt Airport and from many European cities). And, it is also fun!

Birgit Bauer is the owner of Bauer Business Research. She is a veteran Information Professional in Austria. Birgit ran the information service of Austria Wirtschaftsservice, the development bank for small and medium-sized companies of the Republic of Austria. Then she was a Group Manager of one of the leading and globally active research & analytics providers in India with clients from the USA and Europe. She is a long-standing member of AIIP.